Sizzling summer savings on large-format scanning and digitization

Still cramming oversized documents into your file cabinets? Photographs, posters and other important large-format materials at risk from disaster? Not even sure where the office blueprints are stored anymore?

Historically, large-format paper records were neglected in digitization projects because of the perception that conversion is complex. Today, as more organizations learn about the ease and security of the technology, large-format digitization is one of the hottest office trends.

How can you keep pace? This summer, free your organization from the hassles and worries of oversized paper documents with an affordable complete digitization package. We're offering a savings bundle on a large-format printer and software to digitize, store and utilize your larger documents. You'll

- Gain fast, searchable access to oversized document
- Protect historic and archived photographs and other important records from disaster and theft
- Retrieve documents and information anytime from virtually any device (including smartphones!)

As an added benefit, you'll save time and money across your entire office with the versatile cloud-based PaperVision.com content management system. PaperVision.com makes it easy to securely organize, protect and utilize all of your organization's information.

Don't wait to take advantage of this special deal. This offer of two months of PaperVision.com (a $480 value) and free Nextimage software (a $650 value) with a purchase of a qualifying Context scanner runs through August.

"The collaboration between Digitech Systems and Context makes it easy for new and existing customers to implement a secure management solution into their scanning workflow," says Steve Blanken, General Manager, Context.

HK Bain, CEO, Digitech Systems, says: "With Context scanners and PaperVision.com, information becomes securely accessible from any location, and data security is as simple as scan and save."
